Market Summary

Economic Conditions

- The course for markets in 2019 remains uncertain; but for now, volatility has subsided, stocks have rebounded, and credit spreads have narrowed. While the turbulent December is behind us, markets are poised to face several headwinds, including: disappointing corporate earnings, trade tensions, Brexit, and a global slowdown.
- At the January 2019 meeting, the Federal Reserve (Fed) left the fed funds target rate unchanged at its current range of 2.25% to 2.50%, taking a “wait-and-see” approach to monetary policy. Fed Chair Jay Powell stressed “patience” on rate hike guidance, most likely the result of increased market volatility and a slowdown in global growth.
- Congressional leaders and the Trump administration compromised and agreed to a three-week stopgap funding bill to end the longest government shutdown in US history. The bill will keep federal agencies open and provide funding for government-run programs, while giving lawmakers and the president additional time to negotiate over other funding issues.
- The U.S. labor market remains exceptionally strong, underscoring a resilient US economy. The latest job report showed nonfarm payrolls increased by 304,000 in January, exceeding expectations of 165,000. Moreover, the unemployment rate ticked higher from 3.9% to 4.0%, partially due to the partial government shutdown.

Market Reaction

- The US Treasury yield curve is flat and remains slightly inverted between 2- and 5-year maturities. Over the month, yields were relatively unchanged, albeit lower across most maturities by 0.02% to 0.08%.
- As a result of the generally parallel shift downward in the yield curve in January, fixed income returns were largely positive, with longer duration indexes outperforming their shorter-term counterparts.
