Last year, twenty-one community members were appointed to the Santa Rosa Charter Review committee - a body that meets every decade and reviews the City’s constitution. These twenty-one people were an incredibly diverse group of un-elected community leaders from across Santa Rosa, who spent months analyzing and discussing the City’s governance structure. Measure J is a package of their recommendations for the public to consider.

Some of the proposed reforms are minor technical changes. Some are clarification of ambiguities or seek to eliminate conflicting language. Other changes are more substantive and permissive, such as allowing a two-year budget or allowing ballot measures to be considered more frequently than once per decade.

You can learn more about the Charter Review committee, watch its meetings, read its staff reports, and find their final recommendations at: https://www.srcity.org/3621/City-Charter-Review-2022.

After months of hard work by the committee, we recommend a yes vote on Measure J.
